

Trigedasleng Reference Grammar and Lexicon

by David J. Peterson

Introduction

Trigedasleng is the language of the Trigeda Kru (a.k.a. the Grounders) living in the woods in the series The 100. It's an evolved form of English that began as a code or secret language invented by the Trigeda Kru in order to survive. This document details the grammar and lexicon of the language, as well as the language's evolution.

1. Trigedasleng Language Description

Phonology:

- The phonetic inventory of Trigedasleng is listed below (phonemes in parentheses occur only in borrowings):

Consonants

	Labial	Dental	Alveolar	Palatal	Velar	Glottal
Stops	p, b, p ^h		t, d, t ^h	tʃ, dʒ, tʃ ^h	k, g, k ^h
Approximants			ɹ, l, r	j	w
Fricatives	f, v	θ	s, z	ʃ		h
Nasals	m		n		ŋ

Vowels

	Front	Central	Back
High	i/ɪ		ʊ/u
Mid-High	e	ə	o
Mid-Low	ɛ		ɔ
Low	æ

- There are two diphthongs: ai and au.
- The symbols listed in the tables above are phonetic symbols. These will be used to transcribe Trigedasleng words, but not to write them. To write them, I've devised a romanization system that should make the pronunciation fairly transparent. That transcription system is listed below:
 - The following sounds will be written using the same letter as their phonetic symbol: p, b, t, d, k, g, l, w, f, v, s, z, h, m, n, i and u.
 - The aspirated stops sounds [p^h], [t^h], [tʃ^h] and [k^h] will be spelled p, t, ch and k, following usual English pronunciation rules.
 - The sounds [tʃ] (like the "ch" in "chart") will be spelled ch.

- The sounds [dʒ] (like the "j" in "jar") will be spelled j.
- The sound [j] (like the "y" in "yellow") will be spelled y.
- The sounds [ʃ] (like the "sh" in "shark") will be spelled sh.
- The sound [ŋ] (like the "ng" in "sing") will be spelled n when occurring before velar consonants; otherwise it will be spelled ng.
- The sound [ɹ] (like the "r" in English "red") will be spelled r. (Note: Below, for the sake of simplicity, [ɹ] will be spelled [r] in phonetic notation.)
- The sound [ɹ] (like the "dd" in English "middle") will be spelled d.
- The sound [θ] (like the "th" in "thin") will be spelled th.
- The sound [ɪ] (like the "i" in "thin") will be spelled i.
- The sound [ʊ] (like the "u" in "push") will be spelled u.
- The sound [e] (like the "a" in "gate") will be spelled ei.
- The sound [o] (like the "o" in "tote") will be spelled ou.
- The sound [ɔ] (like the "aw" in "law") will be spelled o.

Romanization and Pronunciation:

- The romanization system in use for Trigedasleng is regular, so that a word is always pronounced exactly as it's spelled. I'm going to describe the full system in detail below:
 - A, a: Pronounced like the "a" in "sofa" at the end of a word; otherwise, pronounced like the "a" in "cat".
 - Ai, ai: Pronounced like the "i" in "kite".
 - Au, au: Pronounced like the "ow" in "how".
 - B, b: Pronounced like the "b" in "bat".

- Ch, ch: Pronounced like the "ch" in "chat".
- D, d: Pronounced like the "d" in "dog".
- E, e: Always pronounced like the "e" in "get".
- Ei, ei: Pronounced like the "a" in "gate".
- F, f: Pronounced like the "f" in "fate".
- G, g: Pronounced like the "g" in "goat" (never like the "g" in "genus").
- H, h: Pronounced like the "h" in "hop".
- I, i: Pronounced like the "i" in "machine" or like the "i" in "kid".
- J, j: Pronounced like the "j" in "jam".
- K, k: Pronounced like the "k" in "kid".
- L, l: Pronounced like the "l" in "love".
- M, m: Pronounced like the "m" in "matter".
- N, n: Pronounced like the "n" in "never".
- O, o: Pronounced like the "aw" in "law" or the "a" in "father".
- Ou, ou: Pronounced like the "o" in "tote".
- P, p: Pronounced like the "p" in "pike".
- R, r: Pronounced like the "r" in "red".
- S, s: Pronounced like the "s" in "sad".
- Sh, sh: Pronounced like the "sh" in "shoot".
- T, t: Pronounced like the "t" in "take".

- Th, th: Pronounced like the "th" in "thin" (never like the "th" in "that").
- U, u: Pronounced like the "u" in "ude" or the "u" in "push".
- V, v: Pronounced like the "v" in "van".
- W, w: Pronounced like the "w" in "wet".
- Y, y: Pronounced like the "y" in "yes".
- Z, z: Pronounced like the "z" in "zebra".

Stress:

- Stress is lexical, but semi-predictable if you're familiar with the English word(s) that gave rise to the Trigedasleng word(s). Often stress is irrelevant, as many words are monosyllabic.

Monosyllabic Vowel Final Content Words:

- Monosyllabic content words (i.e. nouns, adjectives and verbs) will end in a vowel. These words will have their vowels lengthened. This happens naturally in English with similar words (for example, the vowel in tree is longer than the vowel in treat). This length will not be marked on the word, but will be indicated in the phonetic transcription.

Morphology and Syntax

- Trigedasleng is an SVO language that is largely isolating. Modifiers tend to precede their heads, but there are postposed verbal/nominal particles. The language is prepositional, and where possession is implied without the use of a preposition, the possessor precedes the possessee. Relative clauses follow the nouns they modify.

Nouns:

- Trigedasleng nouns and pronouns no longer inflect for number or case. To the extent that number marking is required, plurality can be indicated in a few non-obligatory ways:
 - Preposed Particle I:
 - ❖ bosh hef
/bunch-of heft(er)/

"men"

● Preposed Particle II:

- ❖ loda hef
/lot-of heft(er)/
"men"

● Preposed Particle III:

- ❖ emo hef
/them-all heft(er)/
"men"

● Numeral:

- ❖ sis hef
/six heft(er)/
"six men"

Verbs also mark their objects with a postposed particle called a verbal satellite. These verbal satellites are subcategorized by the verb, and will be listed with each verb in the lexicon. The verbal satellite always occurs after the object. Some examples are given below:

- Ai rip em au. "I repair it."
- Ai beja em daun. "I beg him."
- Ai gaf em in. "I want it."
- Ai flosk em klin. "I destroy it."
- Ai top em of. "I fill it."
- Ai as em op. "I ask him."
- Ai kik em thru. "I survive it."
- Ai pul em we. "I draw it away."

Adjectives:

- Trigedasleng adjectives do not agree in either case or number with the nouns they modify. Adjectives do participate in a comparative paradigm, but that paradigm differs from English.
- Comparison: Adjectives in English can take the suffix "-er" to indicate that its quality is greater than another entity, and "-est" to indicate that its quality is superior to all others'. In Trigedasleng, there is only the comparative level; the superlative level has been lost. Comparison is indicated with the preposed particle mou, as shown below:

- Positive (Default):
 - ❖ klir graun
/ clear ground /
"safe ground"
- Comparative:
 - ❖ mou klir graun
/ more clear ground /
"safer ground"
- Superlative:
 - ❖ mou klir graun
/ most clear ground /
"safest ground"

The sound changes related to the comparative paradigm have rendered the superlative/comparative distinction moot, as can be seen above. To emphasize the superlative nature of a construction, the postposed particle sou can be used, as shown below:

- Emphatic Superlative:
 - ❖ mou klir graun sou
/ most clear ground so /
"safest ground"

To express the comparand, use the preposition kom, as shown below:

- Comparative with Comparand:
 - ❖ mou klir graun kom hir
/ more clear ground come here /
"safer ground than here"

Demonstratives:

- There are three types of demonstratives in Trigedasleng based on their distance from the speaker. Their adjectival forms are shown below:

	Form	Example
● Proximal:	disha	disha tro "this patrol"
● Medial:	dei	dei tro "that patrol"

- Distal: dei...de dei tro de "that patrol over yonder (far away)"

These demonstrative adjectives can be turned into demonstrative pronouns as follows:

	Form	Example
● Proximal:	dison	Dison ste klir. "This one is empty."
● Medial:	daun	Daun ste klir. "That one is empty."
● Distal:	daunde	Daunde ste klir. "That one there is empty."

The locative pronouns have stayed closer to their English forms:

	Form	Example
● Proximal:	hir	Em kamp raun hir. "He is here."
● Medial:	der	Em kamp raun der. "He is there."
● Distal:	ouder	Em kamp raun ouder. "He is over yonder."

Verbs:

- Trigedasleng verbs have lost all tense and agreement forms. They've been replaced by an invariant form of each verb that's supported by participles to indicate tense and aspect. Below are given some examples of the various tense aspect particles and how they combine:

- Present Active (Default):
 - ❖ fig
/fig(ure)/
"think"
 - Em fig raun.*
/him fig(ure) around/
"He thinks."
- Past Active:
 - ❖ don fig
/done fig(ure)/
"thought"
 - Em don fig raun.*
/him done fig(ure) around/
"He thought."
- Future Active:
 - ❖ na fig
/(gon)na fig(ure)/
"will think"
 - Em na fig raun.*
/him (gon)na fig(ure) around/
"He will think."

- Imperative: The imperative form of the verb is used to issue commands. Comparatives are the simple bare form of the verb with its concomitant postposed particles:

- Hon em daun! "Capture him!"
- Fig raun! "Think!"

Negative imperatives are formed in the same way negative verbs are formed:

- Nou hon em daun! "Don't capture him!"
- Nou fig raun! "Don't think!"

Commands can be given to non-second person entities by using the auxiliary teik.

- Teik em hon em daun! "Let him capture him!"
- Teik em fig raun! "Let him think!"
- Nou teik em hon em daun! "Don't let him capture him!"
- Nou teik em fig raun! "Don't let him think!"

- Valency: Trigedasleng makes use of a few valency-altering techniques to form different types of clauses and emphasize different parts of the sentence. At this stage both passive and causative structures exist. They'll be explained below. First, the passive constructions:

- Present Passive:

- | | |
|---|---|
| ❖ ge fig op
/get fig(ure) up/
"is thought" | Em ge fig op.
/him get fig(ure) up/
"It is thought." |
|---|---|

- Past Passive:

- | | |
|---|---|
| ❖ don ge fig op
/done get fig(ure) up/
"was thought" | Em don ge fig op.
/him done get fig(ure) up/
"It was thought." |
|---|---|

- Future Passive:

- | | |
|---|---|
| ❖ na ge fig op
/(gon)na get fig(ure) up/
"will be thought" | Em na ge fig op.
/him (gon)na get fig(ure) up/
"It will be thought." |
|---|---|

The agent of a passive verb may be introduced with the preposition kom, as shown below:

- Present Passive:
 - ❖ Em ge fig op kom ai.
/him get fig(ure) up come I/
"It is thought by me."

Causative constructions are actually formed in the same way that non-second person commands are formed, using the auxiliary teik. Here are some examples:

- Present Causative:
 - ❖ Ai teik em fig raun.
/I take him fig(ure) around /
"I make him think."
- Past Causative:
 - ❖ Ai don teik em fig raun.
/I done take him fig(ure) around /
"I made him think."
- Future Causative:
 - ❖ Ai na teik em fig raun.
/I (gon)na take him fig(ure) around /
"I will make him think."

Both constructions can be combined in additive ways. Both possibilities are shown below, using the present as an example:

- Present Causative Passive:
 - ❖ Ai teik em ge fig op.
/I take him get fig(ure) up /
"I make it be thought."
- Present Passive Causative:
 - ❖ Ai ge teik na fig raun.
/I get take (gon)na fig(ure) around /
"I am made to think."

Notice for the latter the future /purposive connective na is used.

Finally, intransitive verbs usually come with a postposed particle indicating that the verb takes no object. For most active verbs, that particle is raun. It's only used with active verbs; never with verbs that have been passivized (those use their transitive particles). Verbs that use a different particle will have it listed. Some motile verbs use adverbs instead. Those verbs will be noted in the lexicon.

- Negation: To negate a verb, simply place nou in front of the clause. Several examples are shown below to demonstrate ordering:

- Present Active:

- ❖ Ai nou fig raun.

- /I no fig(ure) around /

- "I don't think."

- Future Active:

- ❖ Ai nou na fig raun.

- /I no (gon)na fig(ure) around /

- "I won't think."

- Present Passive:

- ❖ Em nou ge fig op kom ai.

- /him get fig(ure) up come I /

- "It is not thought by me."

- Participles: Participles are formed in a number of ways. The active participles are listed below:

- Purposive Active Participle: hef na fig raun "thinking man"

- Eventative Active Participle: hef ste fig raun "thinking man"

- Descriptive Active Participle: hef (bilaik) fig raun "thinking man"

The differences between these three participles are extremely subtle. A purposive participle is used to describe a noun that will take on or be associated with the characteristics of the participle in the future. An eventative participle is used to describe what a noun is currently in the process of doing or is currently like. A descriptive participle is a phrase used to describe the way a noun always is. In the case of the descriptive participle, the subordinator bilaik is optional, and is more likely to be used in on-the-fly constructions.

Passive participles feature the same split, as shown below:

- Purposive Passive Participle: hef na ge fig raun "man to be thought of"
- Eventative Passive Participle: hef ste ge fig raun "being thought of man"
- Descriptive Passive Participle: hef (bilaik) ge fig raun "thought of man"

Adverbs:

- There is no longer a distinction between adjectives and adverbs. Instead, adjectives used in adverbial positions are taken to be adverbs.

Relative Clauses:

- Relative clauses in Trigedasleng are basically non-existent. What serve as relative clauses are simply clause chains that make use of resumptive pronouns. Some examples are shown below:

- Subject: Hef don riz em daun em laik lukot.
"The man who seduced him is a friend."
- Direct Object I: Hef don ge riz daun em laik lukot.
"The man who got seduced is a friend."
- Direct Object II: Hef plan don riz daun em laik lukot.
"The man the woman seduced is a friend."
- Location: Trap ai don riz em daun raun der em ge flosk klin.
"The base where I seduced him was destroyed."

In general, Trigedasleng is far more analytic than English is at this stage, despite English itself being fairly analytic now.

Questions:

- Yes/No Questions: Yes/no questions are questions that are often answered with either "yes" or "no". Yes/no questions are identical in form to their corresponding statements, with the only distinction being intonational. A short example is shown below:
 - Yu don riz em daun. "You seduced him."
 - Yu don riz em daun? "Did you seduce him?"

Negative yes/no questions are quite common, and are formed simply as shown below:

- Din yu don riz em daun? "Didn't you seduce him?"
 - Din yu na riz em daun? "Won't you seduce him?"
- WH-Questions: WH-questions are so called because in English, most WH-questions feature a word that has "w" and "h" in it (i.e. who, why, what, where, when or how [or even which]). To form a WH-question, a WH-word is used to stand in place of the element being questioned. Examples are given below:
 - Who: Chon don riz em daun?
 "Who seduced him?"
 - What: Chit don riz em daun?
 "What seduced him?"
 - Where: Weron yu don riz em daun?
 "Where did you seduce him?"
 - When: Taim yu don riz em daun?
 "When did you seduce him?"
 - How: Ha yu don riz em daun?
 "How did you seduce him?"
 - Which I: Chon emo hef don riz em daun?
 "Which man seduced him?"
 - Which II: Chon yo hef don riz em daun?
 "Which one of you men seduced him?"
 - Whose: Chon emo hef don riz em daun?
 "Whose man seduced him?"
 - How Many: Hani hef don riz em daun?
 "How many men seduced him?"
 - Why I: Hakom hef don riz em daun?
 "Why did the man seduce him?"

- Why II: Chomouda hef don riz em daun?
 "Why did the man seduce him?"

Historical Notes

- Below is a behind-the-scenes description of the historical processes that gave rise to the alternations seen in Trigedasleng. In the descriptions below, a segment, word or phrase preceded by an asterisk (*) is a proto-form. A proto-form is an older form that's no longer present in the modern language.
- Post Nasal Loss of T: t > Ø / n_*
 The sound t* was lost after nasal consonants.
- Pre-Liquid Simplification: oil > ol; *ol > o; *er > o; *ar > o; er/or > a / _#
 A variety of sounds simplified before the l and r sounds.
- Loss of TH: th [ð] > d*
 The th* sound in words like then and that became d in all instances.
- Loss of Word-Final TH: th [θ] > t / _*
 Instances of word-final th* have been replaced by t.
- Nasal Assimilation: N > [a]place / _C[a]place
 Nasal consonants assimilated in place to following consonants.
- Loss of High Lax Vowel Distinction: [i] / [ɪ] > i; [u] / [ʊ] > u
 Though pairs like pit / Pete and hood / who'd exist in English, such pairs have been eliminated in Trigedasleng.
- Loss of Possessives:
 As a way to distinguish itself, the original code required the use of invariant pronouns (since those who weren't in the know would naturally use objective and possessive forms). This practice stuck and became a part of the language.
- Verbal Satellites:
 The most noticeable grammatical innovation of Trigedasleng is the use of verbal satellites. These are former prepositions that have now been reanalyzed as postpositions and/or adverbs that modify the meaning of a given verb. They are now obligatory, whereas in English they're relatively fluid.

3. How to Read the Dictionary

Below is a sample dictionary entry from the Trigedasleng-English side of the dictionary. Each item has a number which corresponds to an explanation below the entry:

1. Citation Form: Trigedasleng words will be listed by their citation form. The citation form will be the most basic form of a word, which, given the nature of the language, should be exactly how the word appears when used in a sentence.
2. Verbal Satellite: Each transitive verb employs a specific verbal satellite that follows the object of the sentence. The verbal satellite associated with a given verb will be listed in parentheses after the verb's citation form. This satellite form will only appear in dictionary entries for verbs.
3. Phonetic Form: This is how the word is pronounced. The transcription will be written in IPA, and will be more or less phonetic (unimportant details being left out).
4. Etymology: Since Trigedasleng derives ultimately from English, the English word or words the Trigedasleng word derives from will be listed here preceded by an asterisk, indicating that the form is a proto-form. Where parts of these proto-forms appear in all caps, the letters in all caps indicate where the sound of a given Trigedasleng word came from specifically. In the example above, the Trigedasleng word fig was taken only from the first three sounds of the English word figure, and so this is indicated by capitalizing the first three letters of the English word.
5. Part of Speech: The part of speech refers to the Trigedasleng part of speech, and not the English part of speech. Below is a list of the Trigedasleng parts of speech:
 - (adj.) = adjective
 - (adv.) = adverb
 - (aux.) = auxiliary
 - (cc.) = coordinating conjunction
 - (conj.) = conjunction
 - (contr.) = contraction
 - (det.) = determiner

- (expr.) = expression
- (n.) = noun
- (nm.) = name
- (np.) = noun phrase
- (part.) = particle
- (pref.) = prefix
- (prep.) = preposition
- (pron.) = pronoun
- (sc.) = subordinating conjunction
- s/o = someone
- s/t = something
- (suf.) = suffix
- s/w = somewhere
- (v.) = verb
- (vp.) = verb phrase

6. Word Type: This system identifies how common a given word is and whether or not it's impolite—plus it identifies words that may be interesting examples to share. The system is described below:

- {0...} = The word is common and likely to be used by all people in most situations.
- {1...} = The word is marked for some reason (either it's a rare technical word, or the least common word used amongst a family of synonyms, or is only used in formal situations, or some other specific context).
- {...0} = The word is polite, or, at the very least, neutral, and will likely not cause offense if used in mixed company.
- {...1} = The word is crude or offensive and would be likely to cause offense if used in mix company.
- {...}* = This word is unique or interesting enough to share as an example of a unique word from the language or universe of the franchise, or as an example of an homage, or an Easter egg. The word might also illustrate some unique or informative phonological or morphological alternation that would be worth remembering.
- {...}† = This word is categorized as Oflansleng. Oflansleng is vocabulary that is useful in the real world, but which may have no currency in the universe of The 100. It's not to say the words couldn't be used in that universe, but that we're not certain that they fit in the universe.

7. Definition: Some words will have single word definitions, others multiword definitions.

8. Extra Information: Extra information will appear in parentheses. The extra information is there to give the reader a clearer idea of exactly how the word is used. Often sociocultural information about a given word will appear in parentheses. In this case, information is provided that explains how the word fig can be modified by a subordinate clause.

The English-Trigedasleng side of the dictionary is fairly straightforward, and will attempt to provide the reader with a one-to-one translation of a given word. The parts of speech should be familiar (they're English parts of speech). Where a one word gloss is insufficient to understanding how a given Trigedasleng word is to be used, I've added the parenthetical comment (see entry). It's advisable that the language user reference the entry for words with this parenthetical comment in the Trigedasleng-English side of the dictionary.
